CASE NOTES

This month we report on seven appeals covering diverse situations associated with subdivision, development and land use activities from around the country.

- A successful appeal resulting in an increase of the number of dwellings from two to three as permitted activities in certain residential zones in the Auckland Unitary Plan;

- A largely unsuccessful application for judicial review of a decision by Queenstown Lakes District Council to approve a non-complying residential development;
  - An appeal to the High Court against a decision of the Environment Court relating enforcement orders served on the appellant for unauthorised works on an esplanade reserve adjoining a property at Avondale, Auckland;
  - Two decisions on applications by Auckland Council for a declaration on the interpretation of the multiple provisions in its own unitary plan and the hierarchy of the general rules, overlays, Auckland-wide provisions, zones, precincts and standards, and the priority where there are conflicts between different provisions;
  - Two applications for declaration involving situations at Wanganui; one an interpretation of “existing ground level” and another on the acceptability of an engineer as a “suitably qualified and experienced geotechnical engineer”.
